Man Made Diamond Ring

Man made diamonds, however, are much easier to create. Instead of destroying forests and and creating conflict, man made diamonds are created in a controlled laboratory by trained scientists who replicate the conditions under which Diamond's are naturally developed in the Earth.

While natural diamonds sound more romantic, in reality most mined diamonds come from conflict-torn regions, and forests and ecosystems are destroyed throughout the mining process. Man made diamonds on the other hand, are grown in a lab using only a modest amount of resources. Additionally, creating diamonds in a lab shortens the distance between the mines origin and final destination, thus eliminating carbon emissions that otherwise would have been released during delivery.

Man Made Diamonds

Man made diamonds are physically and optically identical to mined diamonds. Man made diamonds, however, are much easier to create. Instead of destroying forests and and creating conflict, man made diamonds are created in a controlled laboratory by trained scientists who replicate the conditions under which Diamond's are naturally developed in the Earth.

Man made diamonds are exactly like mined diamonds, with added environmental and humanitarian benefits to boot:

Cost

Man made diamonds are created at a much faster rate than natural diamonds. Thus, there are more man made diamonds to go around! More supply means more reasonable prices for consumers. So, even though man made diamonds are difficult to tell apart from natural diamonds for even for the most experienced jewelers, they are much more affordable.
